

Brac University (BracU), was established by the world’s largest NGO BRAC to be the first higher education institution for ‘human development’ in South Asia. By leveraging and institutionalizing BRAC’s 40 years of poverty reduction, BracU offers an unparalleled real-world academic experience to neighboring South Asian students.

To continually enrich and broaden its experiential, immersive applied learning within the region’s own economic, political, cultural and social contexts, BracU seeks eligible, high potential South Asian students for its prestigious scholarships.

“I believe Brac University is the best thing that happened to me. It enabled me to experience diversity and quality education. I quickly got adjusted here and fell in love with the food and the culture of Bangladesh. It has a favorable educational environment where professors and students work together to make the education better. My journey to BracU has been a life changing experience for me.”

- Ranjita Yadav, B.Sc. in Computer Science & Engineering
From Nepal

Scholarship and Financial Aid for International students

To keep pace with Brac’s focus on adolescents and youth as a special group of the country, Brac University (BracU) offers quality tertiary education, as well as financial support to meritorious students who come from disadvantaged communities. Brac University promotes the values of lifelong learning as part of its social responsibility initiative for the development of young leaders. Student recruitment, retention and graduation are key components of BracU’s strategic plan. Hence, scholarship and tuition fee waiver are offered to attract students with high potential, to remove financial barriers and provide access to qualified students. Each semester, Brac University is proud to honor academically talented and exceptionally skilled students with a variety of scholarships and awards. The university annually awards more than 100 million Taka (Approx. USD 1.2 million) as scholarships to both undergraduate and postgraduate students.
